Then a soldier came into the cowshed and said there were some more bodies putside. We went out into the road. Four mules stood there, in the moonlight, in the road where the trail came down off the mountain. The soldiers who led them stood there waiting. "This one is Captain Waskow," one of them said quietly.

Two men unlashed his body from the mule and litted it off and litted it off and litted it off and litted with the low stone wall. Other men took the other bodies off. Finally, there were five lying end to end in a long row, alongside the road. You don't cover up dead men in the combat zone. They just lie there in the shadows until somebody else comes after the unburdened mules moved off to their oflive orchard. The men in the road seemed reluctant to leave. They stood around, and gradually one by one I could sense them moving close to Capt. Waskow's body. Not so

Then a soldier came and stood and he too spoke to the dead captain, not in a whisper but awfully lenderly, and he said: "I'm sure sorry, sir." Then the first man squatted down, and he reached down and took the dead hand, and instead took the dead hand, and instead took the dead hand in his own and looking intently into the dead face, and he never uttered a sound all the time he sat there.

After that the rest of us went back into the cowshed, leaving the five dead men lying in a line, end to end, in the shadow of the low stone wall. We lay down on the straw in the cowshed, and pretty soon we were all asleep.

One out of ten women will develop breast cancer.

Perhaps the two most frightening words to a women are breast cancer. The number one killer of temales, breast cancer is a disease caused by an uncontrolled growth of abnormal cells in the breast tissue. But with detection, effective treatment can be started immediately, therefore improving the patient's prognosis. The survival rate among women who find cancer before it is noticeable is 97 percent. To answer the need for early detection of breast disease, St. Elizabeth Medical Center has established the Breast Diagnostic Program, which provides mammographies at almost one tourth the cost of such procedures being done elsewhere. A convenient diagnostic procedure, mammograms provide patients with high quality, high sensitivity images with minimal radiation exposure. Following the American Cancer Society's guidelines, this simple, painless exam is currently the best method of detecting breast disease. The ACS recommends all women age 35 to 40 pave an initial, routine mammogram; diagnostic exams periodically between age 40 and 50; and very exams alter ace 50.

diagnostic exams periodically between age 40 and 50; and yearly exams after age 50.

How many will detect it in time?

Scheduling for the general public will begin Monday, June 1, and will end on Friday, July 31. Normally, such a procedure would cost $95 to $100. Subsidized by the Gussie Glik Cancer Fund, this procedure is now available for a limited time for only $25, which includes the interpretation fee. A physician's referral is required.
